CPYRGHT

The exciting, and serious, story of the far-flung web—of conspiracy, murder, bribery, sex, business, the underworld, American politics and Communism—spun by the last non-ideological dictator in the Caribbean: Rafael Trujillo of the Dominican Republic.

An eyewitness account of the assassination of Trujillo, and the subsequent investigation of the plot that involved the U.S. State Department and the CIA.

How Trujillo spent more than $5,000,000 bribing influential American Congressmen (and executive officials), from the far North to the deep South, for political protection and favorable sugar quotas.

Trujillo's struggle to the death with Fidel Castro—his invasion of Cuba, his assassination plots, his warning to an American Senator about Castro's Communist past long before the Cuban revolution—and how the U.S. State Department protected Castro from Trujillo's "network of terror."

The real story of the controversy over the Golindex mystery, and the deep involvement of America's powerful CIA.
